2 ARE FLYING FROM ROME TO BUENOS AIRES

FAR THE LONGEST NON-STOP FLIGHT EVER ATTEMPTED

MAJOR FERRARIN AND MAJOR DEL PRETE NOW OFF THE BRAZILIAN COAST

ASSUMING STILL IN FLIGHT, THEY ARE HOLDERS OF ENDURANCE RECORD

Buenos Aires, July 5—Safe over South American mainland after breaking all long distance flight records, Major Arturo Ferrarin and Major Carlo Del Prete of the Italian air force passed over Natal, Brazil at 2 P. M. today and continued southwards towards Buenos Aires, their destination.

Buenos Aires, July 5.—(UP) — Nearly two days out on a 2½ day flight from Rome to Buenos Aires—by far the longest non-stop flight ever attempted—Major Arturo Ferrarin and Major Carlo Del Prete of the Italian royal air force were presumed today to be off or over the Brazilian coast, speeding southward.

Already the holders of the world endurance flight record, the aviators assuming they still are flying, as frequent radio signals have indicated, have smashed the long-distance record by hundreds of miles.

If they complete their flight to Buenos Aires, they will have made 7,000 miles, nearly twice the present record.

Since they passed over the Straits of Gibraltar Tuesday evening, the fliers have radioed repeatedly—down the African coast, over the Cape Verde Islands, to ships at sea and now in the area between Fernando Do Noronha, the rocky island off the Brazilian coast, and the South American mainland.

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 5. —With all long distance flight records broken, Major Arturo Ferrarin and Major Carlo Del Prete, of the Italian royal air force, were believed today to be speeding at 135 miles an hour down the Brazilian coast toward Buenos Aires on a 7,000-mile airplane flight from Rome.

The two flyers, the stars of the crack Italian air force, left Montecelio Airdrome at Rome at 1:51 P. M., EST, Tuesday, determined to break their own world record for endurance as well as to establish a record that would be hard to break for a point-to-point flight.

Their route to Buenos Aires was almost twice as long as that of Lindbergh from New York to Paris.

From time to time the aviators have signalled that all was going well, but have not given their position.

The latest message concerning them—an unconfirmed one from Rio De Janeiro to the Italian Radio Corporation at Rome—said that they had been seen flying southward along the Brazilian coast.

Rome, July 5.—The Italian Radio Corporation shortly after noon today announced receipt of a radiogram from Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, saying that the Ferrarin-Del Prete airplane, flying from Rome to Buenos Aires, had been seen flying southward along the Brazilian coast.

3 OF 24 IN ICY WASTES COME OUT ALIVE

REPORTS THAT 3, MISSING SINCE MAY 30, HAD BEEN SEEN

RUSSIAN AVIATOR BABUSHKIN AND TWO AIDES FIGHT ICE FLOES

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, July 5.—(UP)—Three of the 24 men who have ben trapped within the bitterly cold Arctic wastes have come out alive and reports reaching here said three others—missing since May 30, had been seen.

The three men who came out were the Russian aviator Babushkin and his two aides.

Friday Babushkin started an airplane search for members of the crew of the dirigible Italia. He was working in connection with the Russian ice breaker Maligin.

Four days passed without a word of the Russian hero. His radio was of small range and signals were not picked up. A fog held over the territory.

He had been forced down in open water because of the fog and he and his two companions had battled for hours to prevent the floating ice bars from crushing the fragile seaplane.

Finally he was able to take-off again and returned to his mother ship without having sighted any of the missing polar explorers.

Meanwhile reports drifted here that the Stockholm Dag Bladet had printed an interview with Captain H. Riiser-Larsen saying that the men on the ice encampment had traced Finn Malmgren and two aides as far as Foyn Island.

These three men were landed with the dirigible Italia. They started walking towards Foyn Island to seek aid for their companions. Nothing has been heard from them since.

Captain Riiser-Larsen said he could see no reason as yet why Malmgren and his two companions should not be alive. They had a food supply that was capable of 50 days, the flyer said.

Meanwhile no word has come here of Roald Amundsen and his five aides who started to search for the crew of the dirigible, nor has there been any word of the six men who drifted away in the envelope of the great polar craft after it made its forced landing.

FINANCIER FALLS FROM PLANE, DASHED TO DEATH

BRINGS HIS SPECTACULAR CAREER TO A MYSTERIOUS END

London, July 5.—(UP)—Captain Alfred Loewenstein, mystery man of international high finance, said to be the third richest man in the world, brought his spectacular career to a mysterious end when he stepped last night from a door of one of his fleet of private airplanes as it sped across the English Channel, and dropped into the sea.

Today, while the Dunkirk fishing fleet dragged the French coasts and the English-Belgium airplane route for his body, stocks in Loewenstein's companies slithered down in demoralized fashion on the London exchange.

The mystery of Loewenstein's end though apparently susceptible of simple explanation, caused wide conjecture through European financial circles.

Somewhere about mid-channel, Loewenstein went to the rear of the plane. For some time nothing was thought of his absence. Finally one of the other passengers went to seek him. There was no trace of him. In some way, Loewenstein had stepped out of the entrance door to the cabin.

Loewenstein's friends expressed conviction that he had died accidentally. One of the most intimate of them, who asked that his name be kept secret, said:

"There was nothing for him to worry about. When he left me at 5:30 P. M. to go to Brussels he was in good spirits."

The men all were temporarily stunned by the force of the landing, but were in position to swim to saftey. Private Thomas Standeven, however, was knocked unconscious and carried under water when the plane nosed forward and stuck in the mud.

Captain Wood pulled him to safety.

Private Thomas Standeven, one of the crew of seven aboard the Douglas machine, was hurt about the face and a second man suffered leg injuries which were at first diagnosed as a fracture. EIGHT ESCAPE DEATH THROUGH CALM LEADER

7 HUDDLE IN REAR OF PLANE, COAST DOWN TO FORCED LANDING

Washington, July 5—(UP)—Eight men in an army transport plane escaped possible death today through the calmness of their leader when the huge motor went dead 2,000 feet in the air near Alexandria, Va.

Captain Myron M. Wood, the pilot, ordered his seven companions to discard their parachutes and huddle in the rear of the plane. He then coasted down to a forced landing in the Potomac river.

The men all were temporarily stunned by the force of the landing, but were in position to swim to saftey. Private Thomas Standeven, however, was knocked unconscious and carried under water when the plane nosed forward and stuck in the mud.

Captain Wood pulled him to safety.

Private Thomas Standeven, one of the crew of seven aboard the Douglas machine, was hurt about the face and a second man suffered leg injuries which were at first diagnosed as a fracture. The two men were taken to the naval air station hospital at Anacostia, near here, and then removed to Walter Reed army hospital. The second man's name was not immediately ascertained.

HORDES OF INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATORS FLEE TO RESORTS

AT LEAST 33 LIVES KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN CLAIMED BY HEAT

Chicago, July 5.—(UP) — Swept by heat waves, storms and fatalities of every description, the middlewest was recovering today from one of the most trying Fourths in years.

Hordes of Independence Day celebrators fled the larger cities to spend the holiday in outlying resorts, and thus escaped the intense heat which caused most of the deaths in this section.

At least 33 lives were known to have been claimed by the heat and other causes. The mercury soared into the upper 90's in many places.

Storms which passed over Iowa and Nebraska during the day brought temporary relief in those states, but temperatures rose again later in the day. Communication lines were torn away by a 60-mile wind which swept eastward over the section, but no deaths were reported.

In Chicago and vicinity, nine persons drowned, three were killed in a plane crash, three died from heat prostration, one was killed in an automobile accident and one died from effects of fireworks injuries.

Kansas City reported three heat victims, one drowning and one death from tetanus, the latter resulting from fireworks injuries. An airplane pilot and two boy passengers were killed at Joliet, Ill., when one wing of the plane crumpled during a stunt attempt 1,500 feet in the air.

Bruce Miller, Detroit racing driver, was killed at Milwaukee, in an Independence Day race at the state fair grounds when his car overturned.

St. Louis reported three deaths from various causes, St. Paul one and South Bend, Ind., one.

Washington, July 5.—Local thunder showers are predicted for this afternoon or tonight in the middle Atlantic states, North Carolina and portions of the North Atlantic states, Kentucky and Tennessee.

No great relief from the heat wave was promised. This city, which suffered with 97 degrees yesterday, started out at 8 A. M. three degrees below the same hour of yesterday, while El Paso, Texas, which had 102 yesterday, started off with a decline of six points.

Yuma, Ariz., and New Orleans, which yesterday had 108 and 92 degrees respectively, started out today with prospects of equal heat. Temperatures in New England were higher than yesterday.

Published for the information and entertainment of the home-loving folks in Brainerd and vicinity by the Standard Lumber Co. Paul H. Schuldt, Editor.

In hot July,
The bugs all fly,
The crickets cry,
The breezes sigh,
The days go by,
The sun is high,
The weather's dry—
And so am I.

It's pretty warm, yes! But there's always some fellow worse off than you—consider Messrs. Shadrach, Meshac and Obednego, in the fiery furnace. And speakin' of warm weather, we're headquarters for summer cottages and lake homes. If you're planning to build, or remodel your cottage, get our price delivered to your lot. Always glad to offer suggestions and get you in touch with reliable workmen, no matter how large or small the job may be. Cool off!

Have your own choice for President but if your home needs a new roof let us urge that you make Mule-Hide your one choice. The donkey may stand for a certain political party but the Mule on every roll of roofing and bundle of shingles stands for toughness and quality that can't be beat.

We spent part of the glorious Fourth out at Lum park and the thrill of the day came when two certain young men took a forced ducking when they came down the slide. For some reason or other the roller-coaster decided to go under water like a submarine instead of coasting on top and that seemed to bring a great deal of enjoyment to everybody except the two young men. We're not telling you who they were but the editor of the "Knot Hole" didn't see anything funny about this at all. One reason for this is that we hate to have the wife laugh at us—out loud at that. Especially when there's a crowd around.

Household Hint: When you discover a hole in the screen just turn it before you put it on. This will confuse the flies when they attempt to get in through the hole.

THE KNOT HOLE

Vol. 3 THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1928 No. 27

Published for the information and entertainment of the home-loving folks in Brainerd and vicinity by the Standard Lumber Co. Paul H. Schuldt, Editor.

In hot July,
The bugs all fly,
The crickets cry,
The breezes sigh,
The days go by,
The sun is high,
The weather's dry—
And so am I.

It's pretty warm, yes! But there's always some fellow worse off than you—consider Messrs. Shadrach, Meshac and Obednego, in the fiery furnace. And speakin' of warm weather, we're headquarters for summer cottages and lake homes. If you're planning to build, or remodel your cottage, get our price delivered to your lot. Always glad to offer suggestions and get you in touch with reliable workmen, no matter how large or small the job may be. Cool off!

Have your own choice for President but if your home needs a new roof let us urge that you make Mule-Hide your one choice. The donkey may stand for a certain political party but the Mule on every roll of roofing and bundle of shingles stands for toughness and quality that can't be beat.

We spent part of the glorious Fourth out at Lum park and the thrill of the day came when two certain young men took a forced ducking when they came down the slide. For some reason or other the roller-coaster decided to go under water like a submarine instead of coasting on top and that seemed to bring a great deal of enjoyment to everybody except the two young men. We're not telling you who they were but the editor of the "Knot Hole" didn't see anything funny about this at all. One reason for this is that we hate to have the wife laugh at us—out loud at that. Especially when there's a crowd around.

Household Hint: When you discover a hole in the screen just turn it before you put it on. This will confuse the flies when they attempt to get in through the hole.

Two Grls Rescued From Lum Park Waters; Police Departments Receive no Complaints

Crow Wing county celebrated the Fourth of July in fine fashion yesterday and did so in a safe, sane manner.

With the exception of a few minor car mishaps, burning of fingers from firecrackers, and trivial accidents which no one considered owrthwhile even to mention, the Fourth passed without casualties.

The Brainerd police department reported no arrests and the county sheriv's department did not receive one complaint.

Two girls were rescued from Lum Park waters, one being taken from the water as she came up the third time by J. Burton, Junior Red Cross life saver who jumped into the water with his clothes on and brought her safely to shore. The other girl paddled into deep water and was rescued by Earl R. Berg, water safety director at the beach.

The Midland celebration at Mille Lacs Lake proved popular with its many water attractions while the Crosby celebration attracted people from all parts of the district.

Those who did not participate in these celebrations formed groups for picnic, fishing and outing parties.

ELLIOTT VIEWS FUTURE WITH OPTIMISM

FORECAST that remarkable growth is coming to the northwest in the next 25 to 50 years with a guess that the present population of 7,723,000 will grow to 16,753,960, is made by Howard Elliott, chairman of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, in the July issue of Review of Reviews.

Mr. Elliott reviews the progress of the northwest and "dips into the future" in an article, "The Great Northwest." He writes with authority since he has lived 33 years west of the Mississippi, was President of the Northern Pacific with headquarters at St. Paul from 1903 to 1913, and has had an active interest in railroads serving the northwest since that time.

The article is timed to appear while the National Education Association convention is in progress in Minneapolis.

"The highest civilization can only come if there are good people, good climate, good food, suitable raw materials, good transportation and communication, and an adequate supply of fuel and power," Mr. Elliott wrote.

"The Northwest has all of these. The people are good, average Americans, strong and virile, who are heart and soul for their states and towns. Since 1870 they have helped to build up this wonderful great northwest in which are many beautiful cities, thriving towns, well built with modern conveniences, with comfortable homes equal to those in the older east.

"They passed through a period when they experimented with various political ideas, some radical—possibly socialistic—but so did the people in many other parts of the country, and now they are as careful, conservative, and progressive as those living elsewhere in the United States.

"The climate is healthful and invigorating, and develops strong, healthy men, women and children. Mountains and plains, forests and prairies, are all found in the northwest.

"Land at moderate prices is abundant, suitable for producing a diversity of crops, grains, grasses, fruits vegetables, poultry of all kinds, and with sufficient water and grass for the successful breeding and raising of livestock. Coal, oil, and natural gas are abundant. Approximately 50 per cent of all the water power resources of the United States is in the northwest. Eventually, nearly as much water power can be developed there as in the rest of the country."

Mr. Elliott emphasized that half the timber supply of the nation is in the northwest, that there is iron ore, lead, zinc, coal, and building stone and clays, and that there are unexcelled means of transportation by rail and good highways, with good schools and colleges, good churches and hospitals. The east and northwest are inter-dependent, he said.

"And each section needs the understanding and help of the other," he wrote. "Great as has been the growth of the whole country and of the northwest, up to the present time, the future will be even more important, and this northwest will take an ever-increasing part in national and world affairs as the years roll by.

"To take care of and to prepare for the growth that is coming, larger and more powerful agencies of progress and efficient tools of commerce are being developed all the time. There must be larger banks, greater mills, bigger manufacturing plants, more extensive and better coordinated railroad systems. There must be better training of men in the practice of all the arts and sciences, in business, and in education and social relations."

Discussing the proposed unification of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, Mr. Elliott wrote that "there are some who fail to see the importance of making a railroad system that will eliminate waste and become a most efficient service to the public, and they underestimate the benefits to be obtained in the long future by such elimination of waste." He contended that these persons "let temporary and local conditions blind them to the large picture of national efficiency and economy with the accumulating benefits flowing therefrom which are increasingly helpful in our national economy."

LEGISLATORS IN LAKE REGION

THE Brainerd Lake Region is growing so famous that prominent legislators are making it their summer capital. For instance, Lieutenant Governor W. I. Nolan of St. Paul, has bought the summer cottage of Representative Edward P. Scallon, located on Eagle Lake, near Nokay Lake. Many seasons spent here finally induced Mr. Nolan to become a permanent resident so far as the lake period is concerned.

Another instance is that of Arthur E. Nelson, former mayor of St. Paul, and the nominee of the Republican party for U. S. Senator of Minnesota. For the past three years Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and children have had their summer home on Gull Lake, near Cinosam.

Congress Harold Knutson, in town Tuesday, has newspaper interests at Wadena and frequently spends his vacation in our lake district. One year he had his mother enjoy with him the recreation afforded on Cullen Lake.

St. Paul's official family has a colony on Big Whitefish Lake. At the time of the Elks state convention St. Paul had a larger official representation of the city in attendance than it had at the League of Municipalities gathering.

TO STANDARDIZE FORMS

THE executive commimttee of the Minnesota Association of Registers of Deeds in session in Minneapolis Saturday decided to submit a bill to the next state legislature providing for the standardization of legal forms which are entitled to be filed with state registrars.

A member of this committee is A. G. Trommald, register of deeds and registrar of titles of Brainerd.

MANY motorists spending their vacations in Minnesota will be planning to take their annual outings at the same time that some convention or other event will take place. For their benefit the St. Paul Pioneer Press published a list of outstanding events in Minnesota this summer. Among these are conventions listed at Breezy Point.

C. C. KYLE, purchasing agent for the Northern Pacific, has been elected chairman of the Purchase and Stores division of the mechanical division of the American Railway association. The election took place last week at the annual convention.

IT may be noted that Brainerd yesterday was as quiet as Goldsmith's deserted village.

Number of Apple Trees Declining

No Shortage of Fruit Has Developed and Production Increases.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although the number of apple trees in the United States has been declining since 1910, no shortage of apples has developed and commercial production is increasing. The crop of 1926 was the largest produced in many years. This apparent paradox is explained by an increased output per tree and by the fact that the reduction in the number of trees has taken place largely in scattered family orchards and in the less favorably situated commercial areas. Apple production for the market has been increasing materially in some areas through better orchard management, better selection of varieties, and increased bearing capacity resulting from an increase in the age of the trees.

Decrease in Trees.

For each 100 trees in the country in 1910, there were 70 and 64 respectively in 1920 and 1925, according to the census. In round figures the decrease from 1910 to 1925 was about 79,000,000 out of a total of 217,000,000 trees reported in the former year. The significance of this decline is modified by the fact that in the box apple region of the Mountain and Pacific states no less than 55 per cent of the trees were not of bearing age in 1910. By 1920, the percentage of nonbearing trees had fallen to 13, and the same percentage is reported by the census for 1925. It would be a distinctly unfavorable augury for the apple industry had plantings from 1910 to 1925 been large enough to prevent a decline in the proportion of trees not of bearing age.

Present conditions in the apple industry are in marked contrast to those that prevailed eighteen years ago. In 1910 there were 15,000,000 trees not of bearing age in the box apple regions of the Mountain and Pacific states. As these trees came into bearing, the producing capacity of the region increased enormously. In 1920 the region had 175 trees of bearing age for each 100 reported in 1910. From 1920 to 1925, however, the number decreased and in 1925 stood at 151 for each 100 trees of bearing age in 1910.

App' Tree Planting.

In recent years plantings of apple trees have been to a large extent in the eastern apple region and have been chiefly concentrated in the commercial areas. Most areas of heavy concentration of trees are now in regions adjacent to the larger consuming centers, although there are important areas in the West which, because of favorable natural features, successfully produce fruit far from consuming markets. In the states north of the Cotton Belt and east of the Great Plains, farm orchards are fairly evenly distributed. In the western states, scattering of trees throughout extensive areas, in the manner typical of the farming regions of the East, is not found.

Satisfactory Means of Eradicating Cutworms

If one cutworm in the garden cut only one plant and ate that plant, the damages would not be so very great. But the worm is not satisfied with one plant. It usually follows one row and cuts as it goes. In this way one cutworm will do a great deal of damage. The cutworm is nocturnal in its feeding habits. It usually starts to feed late in the afternoon and continues throughout the night. The knowledge of this habit is very essential when the worm is to be poisoned.

Two satisfactory control methods are: first, place a collar of cardboard or tar paper around each plant. This should extend to a depth of two or three inches in the soil. The second method of control is probably the most satisfactory. This control is the use of poison bait. The bait should be scattered late in the afternoon, at feeding time, and near the plants. The poison bait consists of wheat bran, 25 pounds, paris green, one pound, and three oranges or lemons. This material should be thoroughly mixed and brought to a consistency of a thick dough by adding a low-grade molasses, with water when necessary.

Short Farm Notes

The silo stores feed in one-third the space required by hay in the barn.

For the first week, baby chicks should have liquid skim milk instead of water.

• • •

Alfalfa contains the protein needed to balance the silage while the silage supplies succulence.

• • •

Sweet clover should be used as a green pasture crop and as a soil builder rather than for the production of hay or silage.

• • •

The ideal incubator cellar or room is one in which the air is constantly changing without varying perceptibly the temperature of the room itself.

• • •

No stalks remain in the way of farm implements and none are left in feed racks and mangers to be thrown out and wasted when feed is stored in a silo.

Health Authorities Recommend Use of Fly-Tox for Security

Science has proved conclusively that the fly is one of mankind's worst enemies. As a carrier of disease it has no equal. They transmit more than thirty different diseases say eminent authorities.

FLY-TOX not only kills insects easily and quickly, but it has other desirable features as well. It will not stain. FLY-TOX is harmless to mankind and animals. It leaves a fleeting odor that is cleanly and fragrant.

This marvelous insecticide was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. It is a scientific product made to meet today's requirements in a household insecticide.

It is a clear, clean and pure liquid put up in bottles with the blue label. Many imitations are seeking to take advantage of popularity gained by FLY-TOX. Do not be misled. Demand the genuine FLY-TOX. —Advt

New Corsets Are More Shapely, Serviceable

No longer is there a vogue for narrow suspender belts and brief elastic corsets; the new styles are more shapely and more substantial. Many of the new corsets fasten to one side, an idea introduced into heavy satin, cotton and all-elastic corsets. Some women are wearing corselets of thick lace, nicely shaped, and mounted on cotton. Broad satin ribbon is seen with triangles filling up the odd spaces caused by the shaping of the corsets. Interlaced ribbon is used between strips of satin, and it is best to have such corsets made to get the right support when the ribbon may be arranged at the back, front, or the sides. But, whatever the style of corset, it seems imperative that one should choose a flesh shade this season.

Horsepower

James Watt and Matthew Boulton, in the Eighteenth century, began to manufacture hoisting engines to supplant the horses then used in the coal mines of England. They tested the pulling power of a heavy draft horse and found that a horse could lift 330 pounds of coal 100 feet in 1 minute, which is equivalent to lifting 33,000 pounds 1 foot in 1 minute, the accepted test of horsepower today.

ELLIOTT VIEWS FUTURE WITH OPTIMISM

FORECAST that remarkable growth is coming to the northwest in the next 25 to 50 years with a guess that the present population of 7,723,000 will grow to 16,753,960, is made by Howard Elliott, chairman of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, in the July issue of Review of Reviews.

Mr. Elliott reviews the progress of the northwest and "dips into the future" in an article, "The Great Northwest." He writes with authority since he has lived 33 years west of the Mississippi, was President of the Northern Pacific with headquarters at St. Paul from 1903 to 1913, and has had an active interest in railroads serving the northwest since that time.

The article is timed to appear while the National Education Association convention is in progress in Minneapolis.

"The highest civilization can only come if there are good people, good climate, good food, suitable raw materials, good transportation and communication, and an adequate supply of fuel and power," Mr. Elliott wrote.

"The Northwest has all of these. The people are good, average Americans, strong and virile, who are heart and soul for their states and towns. Since 1870 they have helped to build up this wonderful great northwest in which are many beautiful cities, thriving towns, well built with modern conveniences, with comfortable homes equal to those in the older east.

"They passed through a period when they experimented with various political ideas, some radical—possibly socialistic—but so did the people in many other parts of the country, and now they are as careful, conservative, and progressive as those living elsewhere in the United States.

"The climate is healthful and invigorating, and develops strong, healthy men, women and children. Mountains and plains, forests and prairies, are all found in the northwest.

"Land at moderate prices is abundant, suitable for producing a diversity of crops, grains, grasses, fruits vegetables, poultry of all kinds, and with sufficient water and grass for the successful breeding and raising of livestock. Coal, oil, and natural gas are abundant. Approximately 50 per cent of all the water power resources of the United States is in the northwest. Eventually, nearly as much water power can be developed there as in the rest of the country."

Mr. Elliott emphasized that half the timber supply of the nation is in the northwest, that there is iron ore, lead, zinc, coal, and building stone and clays, and that there are unexcelled means of transportation by rail and good highways, with good schools and colleges, good churches and hospitals. The east and northwest are inter-dependent, he said.

"And each section needs the understanding and help of the other," he wrote. "Great as has been the growth of the whole country and of the northwest, up to the present time, the future will be even more important, and this northwest will take an ever-increasing part in national and world affairs as the years roll by.

"To take care of and to prepare for the growth that is coming, larger and more powerful agencies of progress and efficient tools of commerce are being developed all the time. There must be larger banks, greater mills, bigger manufacturing plants, more extensive and better coordinated railroad systems. There must be better training of men in the practice of all the arts and sciences, in business, and in education and social relations."

MORGAN BATTLES CANNONBALL MARTIN TONIGHT

GENE TUNNEY IS NEARING HIS FIGHTING WEIGHT

Speculator, N. Y., July 5.—(U.P.)—With the championship fight with Tom Heeney of New Zealand three weeks away, Gene Tunney is within two and a half pounds of fighting weight. Observers at his training quarters here are of the opinion he is in top form.

The champion was up early yesterday and took to the woods to escape the holiday crowd which visited the camp.

He extended his boxing to eight rounds, going four each with Harold Mays and Billy Vidabeck after warming up only one round on the bag.

DEAN OF RING CHAMPIONS IN TITLE DEFENSE

15-ROUND BOUT TAKES PLACE AT EBBETS FIELD, IN BROOKLYN

MORGAN IN PAST HAS ALWAYS WON WHEN CROWN WAS AT STAKE

New York, July 5.—(UP)—Tod Morgan of Seattle, Wash., the dean of ring champions, will defend his junior lightweight boxing title against Eddie (Cannonball) Martin of New York, former bantamweight champion, in a 15-round bout at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, tonight. Scheduled for last night, the bout was postponed until tonight at the request of Promoter Humbert J. Fugazy.

Since Morgan won the 130-pound crown from Mike Ballerino in 1925 every other boxing championship has changed hands. Oddly enough, Morgan frequently has been beaten in non-championship bouts, but thus far he has always managed to win when his title was at stake.

Peppering Up the Red Sox

By QUIN HALL.

SPORT fans throughout the country are taking a keener interest in the baseball situation at Boston than they have for several seasons.

There is a twofold reason for this. In the National League Rogers Hornsby has taken over the managerial reins of the Braves and the Rajah's boosters are watching to see how the team fares under his tutelage. Hornsby has also added the name of George Sisler to his payroll and there are a bunch of well wishers who would like to see this old time first sacker knock the cover off the apple and finish the year at Boston in a burst of glory.

In the American League the fans are following the efforts of the Red Sox, who seem to be playing far stronger than they did last year. While the team doesn't figure to finish up in the money the boys who pay the tariff are seemingly well pleased with the efforts being put forward by the Boston contingent.

They are especially watching the work of Bill Carrigan, the pilot. At one time Bill was regarded as a master in the pilot house. Coming back last season after an absence of ten years Bill found that conditions had changed considerably. The old homestead wasn't the same as he left it. A livelier ball, extra bleacher seats advantageously placed and such things, had tossed the picture clear out of focus for Carrigan and he had to start in readjusting himself to new conditions.

With a year's experience under his belt the old timer took a still firmer grip on things at the start of the present season and while the Red Sox may not kick up any large supply of dust in the final standings at the close of the year it must be admitted that Bill has his warriors up on their toes and hustling and that spirit means something in any man's ball yard and against any sort of opposition.

There was a time, and not so long ago, that the Red Sox figured that teams visiting Fenway Park were entitled to all the little niceties due "company." For instance if they asked for a second piece of pie they were supposed to get it, even if the home folks went hungry. Carrigan has instilled a spirit into his ball players that has killed all that idea off. His motto and the motto of the players now seems to be that the only thing a visiting team is entitled to is defeat—and plenty of that. While they may not get away with it in every case the spirit still exists and it is likely to cause some of the top notchers more or less trouble during the season.

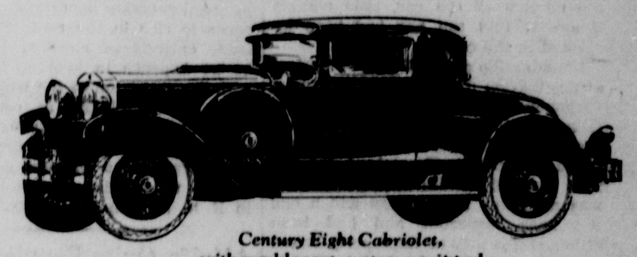

Bill isn't allowing the players to loaf on the job. Doug Taitt, one of Bill's outfielders, learned this fact early in the Spring. Doug didn't run out a drive and Carrigan immediately benched him. He asked for another trial and he has developed into one of the best outfielders Boston has seen in some moons. He isn't loafing on the job and when he hears the crack of the bat he starts beating it for the first corner.

A collegian named Tarbert let a runner get an extra base simply because he lost his pep when he misjudged a fly ball. That night he was shipped to the Coast.

It's things like that which prove that Carrigan is up on his toes, fully acclimated to present conditions. He isn't allowing any extra tall grass to grow under the feet of the Red Sox players and while it may not pay such big dividends this year it's a commendable spirit and there are other years to follow.

Garden Tractors Found Excellent

The garden tractor is a thoroughly trustworthy and intensely practical machine, and deserves the attention of vegetable growers who are looking for a way to cut production costs. That is the way D. B. Lucas of the agricultural engineering department, New Jersey state college of agriculture, Rutgers university, evaluates the device which has been on the market but comparatively few years.

Great Labor Saver.

In a statement for New Jersey farmers he says that the garden tractor is a great labor saving machine which displaces both man and horse labor, for it will do much of the work that is now done by hand and will also work nicely in vegetable crops where horses cannot be conveniently used. Also, where short working seasons make it undesirable to keep horses, the garden tractor is an immense boon.

Only an exceptional horse will work in row widths of 15 inches or less. This has led to much hand cultivation where intense production necessitates rows as narrow as 10 or 12 inches. One wheel or two-wheel garden tractors may now be had which are adapted to almost any practical condition. From one to three rows can be cultivated at one time. Shallow plowing may also be done by some of the light cultivators, but it is usually a good practice to use a standard plow and do a thorough plowing job every few years.

Cost Is Important.

The cost is an important consideration in the purchase of a garden tractor, especially when it will be used only for a small home garden. Good machines with cultivating attachments may be had for two hundred dollars and up. A thorough demonstration, in which the buyer himself handles the machine, is important in making a satisfactory selection.

Warn Shippers Against Altering Certificates

Cautioning shippers of hay against altering shipping point inspection certificates issued under the federal-state hay inspection service, either by erasure or addition, or in any other manner, the United States Department of Agriculture has just published the following facts in a recent case of this kind.

A federal-states inspector inspected a lot of about twelve tons of hay on a farm for which he issued a certificate, grading the hay U. S. No. 2 Timothy. The shipper subsequently shipped a carload of hay to Chicago, and inserted on the inspection certificate the number of the car, thus making it appear that the hay had been inspected in the car.

Examination of the hay upon arrival at destination disclosed that it graded variously U. S. No. 3 Timothy Clover Mixed; U. S. No. 2 Timothy; Threshed Timothy (not hay), and U. S. Sample grade Timothy (badly stained, musty). This seemed to indicate that there was some hay in the barn which had not been inspected and had been either negligently or improperly mixed with the inspected lot and loaded in the car.

In any case, the department points out, the addition of the car number on the certificate was improper as it imported that the hay had been inspected in the car, which was not the fact.

Soil Best Adapted for Growing Soy Bean Crop

If soy beans are planted on clean soil and broadcast at the rate of two bushels per acre, one can expect to get from two to three tons of hay per acre. Soil that will produce good corn will usually raise soy beans satisfactorily. Soil that is too acid to raise alfalfa or sweet clover will usually produce a satisfactory crop of soy beans if other conditions are good.

The ground which is sown to soy beans should be carefully worked before the beans are sown. Frequent harrowing is necessary to keep out the foxtail and similar grasses until the beans get a good start.

Agricultural Squibs

• • •

Limestone and inoculation are two requirements for success with sweet clover.

• • •

It requires about the same preparation to make a good lawn as it does a worthwhile vegetable garden.

• • •

The larger second growth of red clover is of particular advantage as it comes at a time when pasture is badly needed.

• • •

Calcium Arsenate Is Efficient for Bugs

Calcium arsenate, familiarly known as an efficient poison for the control of the cotton boll weevil, is also one of the best poisons for the common potato bug or Colorado potato beetle.

"Calcium arsenate is the cheapest poison that potato growers can use at the present time for the control of the Colorado potato beetle," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State college. "Those who grow potatoes know that this insect can completely destroy the plants in a short while if no control measure is used. Calcium arsenate may be used either as a dust or as a spray and is absolutely effective if properly applied."

In using the material as a dust, Mr. Brannon advises that the potato plants be covered well. The amount to use will depend on the size of the plants and the material may be applied satisfactorily if the regular cotton dusters are used. There is little danger of burning the foliage, but too much poison should not be used for the sake of economy. Recent tests show that good control is secured by this method of poisoning. However, it should be kept in mind that the arsenate is not a control for plant diseases but for insects alone.

If desired, a spray may be made by using two pounds of the calcium arsenate to 50 gallons of water. For the grower with only a small acreage, a spray may be prepared by using ten tablespoonfuls to three gallons of water.

In any event, the applications of either dust or spray should be started as soon as the beetles appear in numbers and should be continued just as often as the bettles become numerous.

Fireproof Barns to Cut Immense Farm Fire Loss

Savings of thousands of dollars in buildings and valuable cattle herds destroyed every year in the United States by disastrous fires may be accomplished in a few years by means of the fireproof barn, described in the Farm and Fireside Magazine.

"Ancestral barns that can be passed on from father to son and on to the next generation" are likely as a result of successful construction of such a fireproof barn at the Iowa State college experiment station, says the magazine.

"If this type of barn proves as successful as it now appears to be it will be possible to do this thing at an expense not exceeding the cost of frame construction by more than 25 to 50 per cent," it continues. "The new type of barn is called a masonry arch barn, which, as the name reveals, is made entirely of masonry and with the upper story in the form of an arch. It is built of tile with reinforced concrete floors and reinforced concrete ribs in the roof. Since it is made entirely of masonry there will be no expense in keeping it painted with the exception of the windows and door frames. Made of construction material that is noncombustible this building would retard a fire to such an extent as to prevent destruction and it would also enable live stock in it to be removed safely."

Alfalfa Quite Popular Roughage for Dairy Cow

There are many roughages that might be used in furnishing dairy cattle with the necessary bulky food. Since roughage is usually the least expensive part of the ration, large amounts should be fed as is consistent with good results.

Roughages vary in numbers depending upon the geographic location of the particular dairymen. Each sector has its own roughages which it uses to good advantage.

Alfalfa hay has become one of the most popular roughages and is the best hay for dairy cattle because it is very nutritious, contains more mineral matter and protein than any other hay, is palatable and serves as a laxative. This particular hay is excellent when fed in the green state, but does not stand pasturing. As for silage, it is very good providing it is allowed to wilt before putting it into the silo. Alfalfa should not be made into silage if the weather condition permits making it into hay and other crops can be used for the silo.

Silage for Economical Milk Production Urged

Silage fed with legume hay and a good grain mixture makes a satisfactory and economical ration for the dairy herd. This succulent roughage helps to impart palatability to all feed consumed, keeps the bowels active, and serves as an appetizer when there is nothing but dry feeds available.

The Purdue experiment station found that a ration containing silage, alfalfa and hay and a good grain mixture produced milk for $1.03 for each 100 pounds, while the feeding of double the allowance of hay without silage and the same grain mixture raised the feed cost to $1.14 per 100 pounds. During the periods when silage was fed, the animals gained approximately one-half pound daily in live weight. When hay formed the sole roughage, the loss in live weight was double this amount. This represents a difference of approximately 1.5 pounds per day in body weight in favor of the silage ration.

Are Bills Wise? Ask the Man Who Owes One!

Many people have the mistaken impression that charge accounts and installment buying improve your credit and give a feeling of responsibility. If you want an honest opinion, ask the man whose bills top his income by many dollars every pay-day. He will tell you that credit is never established by going into debt, and that anxiety, not responsibility, is the result of "Charge It."

The J. C. Penney Company is confident that our customers want goods of serviceable quality at the lowest possible price; that they prefer to pay cash and carry their purchases home so that they may put the substantial saving into their own pocket. If we permitted charge accounts we would have to add on an extra charge and this would be unfair to our other customers.

This month, we are celebrating the Anniversary of our Independence. Whether we, as individuals, have benefitted from this freedom, depends on how much we owe. Starting July free from debt, is a "safe and sane" celebration of Independence Day.

Garden Tractors Found Excellent

The garden tractor is a thoroughly trustworthy and intensely practical machine, and deserves the attention of vegetable growers who are looking for a way to cut production costs. That is the way D. B. Lucas of the agricultural engineering department, New Jersey state college of agriculture, Rutgers university, evaluates the device which has been on the market but comparatively few years.

Great Labor Saver.

In a statement for New Jersey farmers he says that the garden tractor is a great labor saving machine which displaces both man and horse labor, for it will do much of the work that is now done by hand and will also work nicely in vegetable crops where horses cannot be conveniently used. Also, where short working seasons make it undesirable to keep horses, the garden tractor is an immense boon.

Only an exceptional horse will work in row widths of 15 inches or less. This has led to much hand cultivation where intense production necessitates rows as narrow as 10 or 12 inches. One wheel or two-wheel garden tractors may now be had which are adapted to almost any practical condition. From one to three rows can be cultivated at one time. Shallow plowing may also be done by some of the light cultivators, but it is usually a good practice to use a standard plow and do a thorough plowing job every few years.

Cost Is Important.

The cost is an important consideration in the purchase of a garden tractor, especially when it will be used only for a small home garden. Good machines with cultivating attachments may be had for two hundred dollars and up. A thorough demonstration, in which the buyer himself handles the machine, is important in making a satisfactory selection.

Warn Shippers Against Altering Certificates

Cautioning shippers of hay against altering shipping point inspection certificates issued under the federal-state hay inspection service, either by erasure or addition, or in any other manner, the United States Department of Agriculture has just published the following facts in a recent case of this kind.

A federal-states inspector inspected a lot of about twelve tons of hay on a farm for which he issued a certificate, grading the hay U. S. No. 2 Timothy. The shipper subsequently shipped a carload of hay to Chicago, and inserted on the inspection certificate the number of the car, thus making it appear that the hay had been inspected in the car.

Examination of the hay upon arrival at destination disclosed that it graded variously U. S. No. 3 Timothy Clover Mixed; U. S. No. 2 Timothy; Threshed Timothy (not hay), and U. S. Sample grade Timothy (badly stained, musty). This seemed to indicate that there was some hay in the barn which had not been inspected and had been either negligently or improperly mixed with the inspected lot and loaded in the car.

In any case, the department points out, the addition of the car number on the certificate was improper as it imported that the hay had been inspected in the car, which was not the fact.

Soil Best Adapted for Growing Soy Bean Crop

If soy beans are planted on clean soil and broadcast at the rate of two bushels per acre, one can expect to get from two to three tons of hay per acre. Soil that will produce good corn will usually raise soy beans satisfactorily. Soil that is too acid to raise alfalfa or sweet clover will usually produce a satisfactory crop of soy beans if other conditions are good.

The ground which is sown to soy beans should be carefully worked before the beans are sown. Frequent harrowing is necessary to keep out the foxtail and similar grasses until the beans get a good start.

Are Bills Wise? Ask the Man Who Owes One!

Many people have the mistaken impression that charge accounts and installment buying improve your credit and give a feeling of responsibility. If you want an honest opinion, ask the man whose bills top his income by many dollars every pay-day. He will tell you that credit is never established by going into debt, and that anxiety, not responsibility, is the result of "Charge It."

The J. C. Penney Company is confident that our customers want goods of serviceable quality at the lowest possible price; that they prefer to pay cash and carry their purchases home so that they may put the substantial saving into their own pocket. If we permitted charge accounts we would have to add on an extra charge and this would be unfair to our other customers.

This month, we are celebrating the Anniversary of our Independence. Whether we, as individuals, have benefitted from this freedom, depends on how much we owe. Starting July free from debt, is a "safe and sane" celebration of Independence Day.

250 ENJOYED OCCASION

Lake Cottages of Church Members Turned Over for Day to Members of Party

Loaded with baskets brimming with picnic delicacies, cars took 250 people, young and old, to the Swedish Bethany church annual Sunday school picnic yesterday at Hubert Lake.

Ideal weather gave bathing enthusiasts an opportunity to participate in many water events. Others took part in games on the beautiful cottage grounds.

The families gathered on the properties of Miss Mary Soderlund, John Stenberg, Swanson and Thon and enjoyed the privileges of the cottages there.

While no official score was kept of the Married Men's-Single Men's kittenball there was no dispute over the fact that the latter team came through victorious. The Married Men offered, good naturedly, the alibi that they lost because part of their team was composed of single men.

So perfect was the day that many were reluctant to leave even after darkness fell.

Protect your investment in your MODEL T FORD

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company is devoting a large part of its factories to making parts, in order that owners may enjoy uninterrupted service for many years to come.

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer at small cost.

New fenders, for instance, cost from $3.50 to $5 each, with a labor charge of $1 to $2.50. Tuning up the motor and replacing commutator case, brush and vibrator points costs only $1, with a small charge for material. Brake shoes can be installed and emergency brakes equalized for a labor charge of only $1.25. A labor charge of $4 to $5 will cover the overhauling of the front axle, rebushing springs and spring perches, and straightening, aligning and adjusting wheels.

The labor charge for overhauling the average rear axle runs from $5.75 to $7. Grinding valves and cleaning carbon can be done for $3 to $4.

A set of four new pistons costs only $7 and an installation charge of $6. For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. Parts are extra.

All of these prices are approximate, of course, because the cost of materials needed will depend on the condition of each car. They show, however, the low cost of putting the Model T Ford in shape for thousands of miles of additional service.

See the nearest Ford dealer, therefore, and have him estimate on the cost of reconditioning your Model T Ford. He will tell you, in advance, exactly how much the complete job will cost.

Love's Ecstasy
by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty blue-eyed country girl, is working as a secretary in New York. She is deeply hurt when Gary Chester, young engineer, whom she had aided after an automobile accident near her mountain home, fails to recognize her. Aleda is stopping, in the city, at the home of Marise de Rense, proprietor of the Harvest Moon Cabaret. The latter's sophisticated younger sister, Goldie, is an entertainer at the cabaret.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE Countess Dellamanca swept into the "Harvest Moon." She was a tall, slim, lissom woman, with a beautiful pale face and ash-blonde hair. There was a coldness in her regal manner, in the arrogant way she held her small and classic head.

But Goldie's eyes were fixed on the man who followed the Countess into the New York night club. And Goldie's tongue voiced a long, disappointed "O-oh!"

"That isn't my prince that long skinnymalink!" The man was helping to remove the magnificent, sable-trimmed and brocaded cloak from the shoulders of the Countess Dellamanca. He was nearing fifty, slightly bald and gray. "My young man is years and years younger and a thousand times better looking! Oh, I'm horribly disappointed."

At their entry, Marise had at once stopped dancing and fussed about the newcomers' table, giving the waiters short, staccato orders, sending them running hither and yon.

"That's the Prince Gallicorde with Countess Dellamanca. They say he's madly in love with her," she breathed in an awed fashion a few minutes later to Aleda. "I'm mighty glad they're here. It gives a sort of 'cachet' to the place."

"'Cachet' be darned!" grumbled her younger sister. "I think Dellacorda's a stuck-up cat!"

The countess, seated in one of the small and quaintly illuminated alcoves, had put her lorgnette to her eyes, and — with a quizzical and amused expression—was looking about the place. She favored Goldie with a patronizing nod.

"Now you run off and change," Marise instructed her sister; "it's nearly time for your act."

She dropped into the vacant seat beside Aleda. She flung an envious look across the room. "Glorious creature, isn't she? See what money does!" she exclaimed. "That cloak alone is worth $3,000. Doesn't it seem unfair how we've all got to work, and the countess has everything?"

"She's very beautiful," Aleda said.

"Hum. Easy to achieve that, with everything at her disposal—beauty parlors, personal maids, masseuses and all. They say she's had her face lifted. I had a good look just now. She wears her hair drawn off her face in the Grecian style, but I couldn't see any scars. Of course, if you pay enough, they say those plastic surgeons do it very cleverly."

Aleda listened, fascinated. She was a girl who took a vital interest in her fellow creatures. This plunge into New York life was like a dream to the unsophisticated country girl.

She wished Marise would tell her more about the countess. It sounded like a story in the Sunday papers, didn't it?

As though she read her thoughts, Marise continued: "Had quite a career, the Countess Dellamanca—and yet she's so proud and haughty and well-educated, that no one thinks of her as being notorious—I mean, she's 'received' everywhere. Her name's always in the social columns. She's been married three times. They do say that at sixteen she ran away from her boarding-school with a fiddler—he played the violin in the orchestra of the local theatre.

"Her people—I don't know who they are — annulled it. She was sent off to Paris—to forget. She studied art, or music, or went to that university they call the Sorbonne, and some years afterwards she came back and fairly queened it with the Parke Avenue set.

"Then came her marriage with a wealthy broker of the name of Schumph. Neither his name nor his looks—he was bald and fat and old enough to be her father—came up to her standard—she was forever going off to Europe and leaving him alone for months and months. Then Schumph died. He left her millions.

"When her short widowhood was over — (they say she looked too wonderful in widow's weeds!) —the men were after her like flies. She'd dozens of them at her feet.

"But she was cool and distant to them all. That's enough of a novelty in any woman, these days, to make her stand out from the usual run of females, don't you think? So her career was full of triumphs. And just as people were beginning to say she'd never marry again—she knew too much—she went over to Rome one Winter and the papers announced a great romance with a Count Dellamanca, a handsome Italian of about her own age.

"Italians are quick wooers, and impetuous and right on top of the rumors came the wedding. He was poor and handsome and of noble family. She had millions. On both sides it was a 'catch.'

"That was four years ago, and now she's back—alone—in New York. I don't know whose the fault is—whether he carried on with other women—or whether, because she had the money she was too obstinate. She looks the bossy sort. Maybe these international marriages don't pay. Italians are high-handed, and won't stand being ritzed by their wives. However, I guess there were faults on both sides."

A pause. Marise glanced speculatively at the beauty escorted by Prince Gallicorde.

"My belief is that she came here a second time on the track of the young man Goldie's so crazy about! He was a clean cut American and very attractive — he brought her here once—I expect it isn't anything like so grand as she's accustomed to — but maybe she heard he came back a second time, without her, and she got jealous, and she thought she'd catch him out!"

Aleda was intrigued, albeit slightly shocked, by all this gossip. She watched the Countess Dellamanca's ice-blue eyes roaming about. . . .

Monday was Aleda's second day of work at the office. It passed very busily without mishap. Every now and then her thoughts would drift to Gary Chester . . . Had he learned that she was here? And would he telephone?

At five she was finishing William B. Lingard's letters and cleaning up her desk. The telephone rang. A voice, staccato, feminine: "Will you kindly tell my uncle I will call for him in my car in ten minutes?"

Aleda assented, hung up the receiver, turned to the Spanish-looking stenographer at the next table. "That must be the young woman you spoke of—"—her heart beat rapidly, recollecting how the stenographer had told that Gary Chester had been "tracked" by the boss's niece.

"Oh, her!" The girl was busy finishing her work and said no more. But, a few minutes later, when a tall, queen-like blonde sailed through the outer office to the inner room, she nudged Aleda, whispering: "There she goes—the firm's high-hat, titled relative!"

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Love's Ecstasy

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty blue-eyed country girl, is working as a secretary in New York. She is deeply hurt when Gary Chester, young engineer, whom she had aided after an automobile accident near her mountain home, fails to recognize her. Aleda is stopping, in the city, at the home of Marise de Rense, proprietor of the Harvest Moon Cabaret. The latter's sophisticated younger sister, Goldie, is an entertainer at the cabaret.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE Countess Dellamanca swept into the "Harvest Moon." She was a tall, slim, lissom woman, with a beautiful pale face and ash-blonde hair. There was a coldness in her regal manner, in the arrogant way she held her small and classic head.

But Goldie's eyes were fixed on the man who followed the Countess into the New York night club. And Goldie's tongue voiced a long, disappointed "O-oh!"

"That isn't my prince that long skinnymalink!" The man was helping to remove the magnificent, sable-trimmed and brocaded cloak from the shoulders of the Countess Dellamanca. RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.
